Biographical Sketch

Billy Glenn Thompson

A native Texas, Thompson lived in McKinney during his youth and continued his academic achievements at Austin College, the University of Houston and Upper Iowa University. He worked with newspapers in McKinney, Paris, Galveston and Houston. He proudly served his country during World War II and the Korean Conflict and wrote for Stars and Stripes. He served the Army Reserve, retiring in 1978 as a lieutenant colonel. A journalist for 42 years who reported the advancements and temporary "set backs" of the petroleum industry, he was the first public information director of the Railroad Commission of Texas, from 1975 to 1981. From 1984 to 1998, he edited the Texas Energy Week, keeping Texas and the Southwest current with significant and relevant energy news. Although Thompson died at his home in Austin, he is buried in Houston's National Cemetery.
